Nahid Ahmed Shihab

Undergraduate student of Brac University.

B.Sc. In Electrical and Electrical Engineering (EEE)

My work is something I am really enthusiastic about. I am driven to succeed because I like what I do. This enthusiasm motivated me to acquire new skills and enhance my performance at my previous employment. For example, to enhance my skills, I studied Photoshop, Robotics, did some courses, etc. I quickly became the go-to guy for kind of all requirements.

I am a self-starter with high ambitions. I like a challenge and often set goals for myself to work towards. I'm always looking for ways to improve and achieve greatness.

I am really organized. I usually keep track of deadlines using notes and other tools. I prefer to keep my work area tidy and my files organized so I can locate what I need quickly. This has been shown to improve efficiency while also assisting the rest of the team. I had to design a new file system that improved departmental efficiency by 25%.

I like social interaction. I love meeting new individuals and learning about their life. I like making strangers feel at ease and finding common ground with them. This skill is useful when beginning new projects with a new Team. Previously, I had 15% better results than the average.

I was born to be in charge. I've been promoted to virtually every level of leadership as a consequence of my drive to assist others. Despite the fact that I am not in charge, coworkers come to me with concerns or problems because they know that if I don't have the answer, I will lead them in the proper way. In less than a year, I was promoted to management in both of my previous positions.

I am a results-oriented person who inspects frequently to see how close or distant we are and what it takes to get there. This pressure drives me and encourages the team. In fact, in the past year, I assisted my team to decrease launch times by two weeks.

I'm a communicator of nature. I am happy to give the right information since it improves outcomes. It is important to have everyone on the same page. These skills have allowed me to retain over 40% of my results within one year and have allowed the team to fulfill 100% of our duties in good time.
